Shadow theatre and music

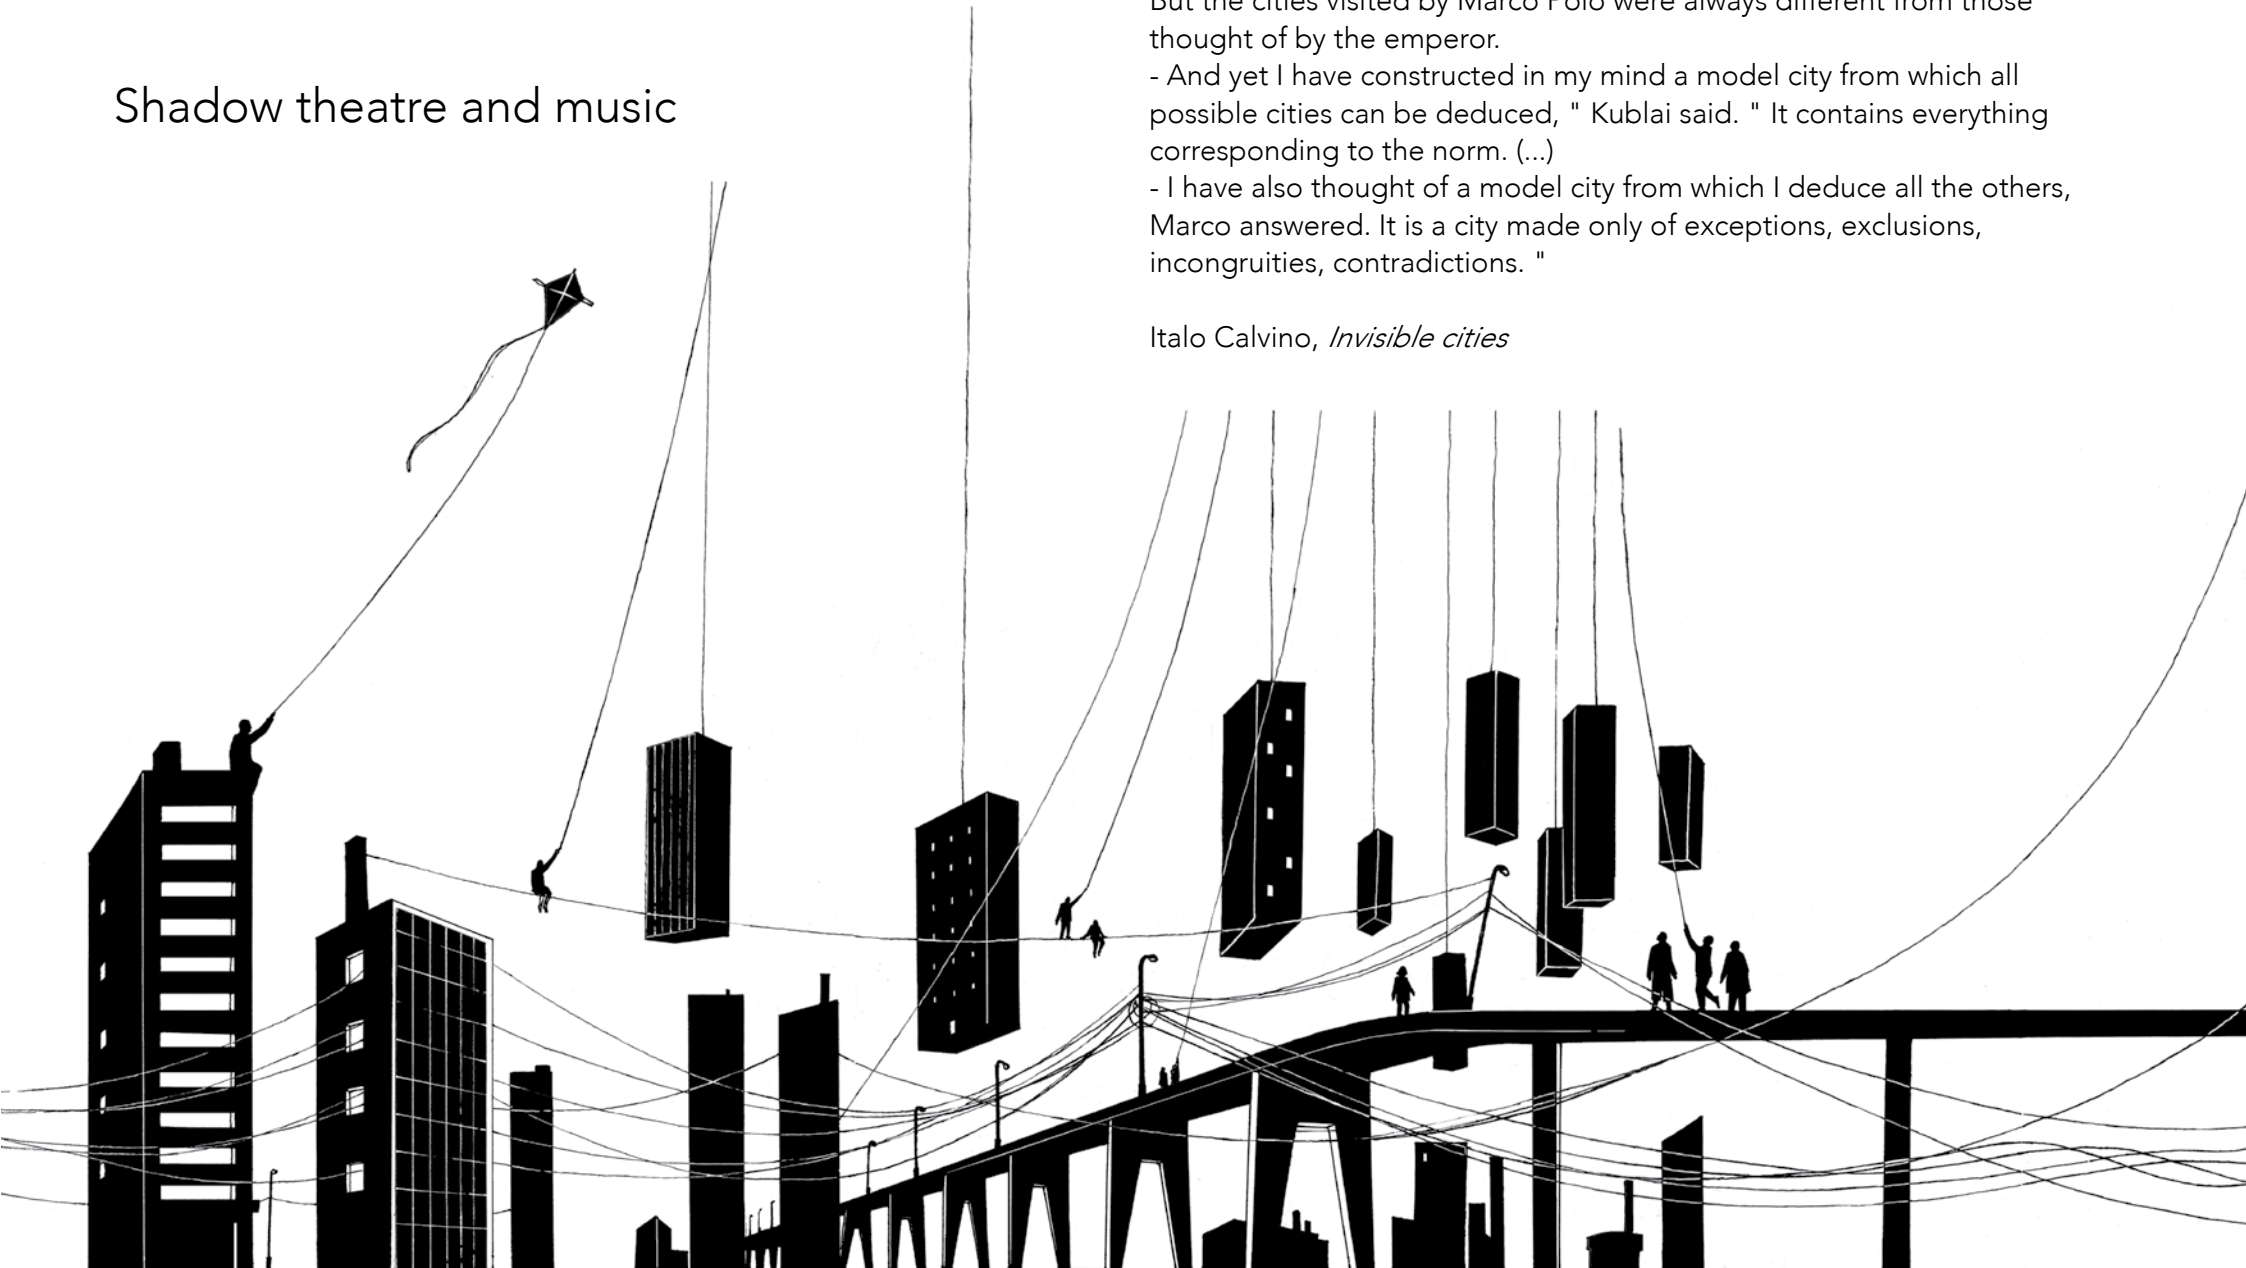

" - From now on, I'll describe the cities to you, the Khan had said. In your journeys you will see if they exist.

But the cities visited by Marco Polo were always different from those thought of by the emperor.

- And yet I have constructed in my mind a model city from which all possible cities can be deduced, " Kublai said. " It contains everything corresponding to the norm. (...)

- I have also thought of a model city from which I deduce all the others, Marco answered. It is a city made only of exceptions, exclusions, incongruities, contradictions. "

THE SHOW

Les Somnambules is a voyage into a city in transition.

An old neighbourhood destined for demolition makes room for a dehumanized modern city. During the night, when the city sleeps, its inhabitants dream. Their dreams echo throughout the city, animating and transforming it into a place where anything is possible.

With irony, Les Somnambules conjures these contemporary transformations and sketches the outline of a city whose contours are redesigned by its inhabitants.

This story is told through a spectacular scale model of the city brought to life by shadows and lights, with four puppeteers and two musicians leading the audience into a swell of imagination.

Les Somnambules examines how urban areas are transformed today and draws a poetic and critical look at our cities.

Far from proposing a model of a utopian city, this piece of theatre imagines an urban area in perpetual evolution, continually being enriched by the dreams of its inhabitants and in which transformations and developments are not forced by others: political decision-makers, developers, urban planners, architects...

A large-scale model of the city, the undeniable starting point to any urban development project, is the principal element of the set: this performance of shadow theatre breaks free from the use of a traditional screen, with the ensemble of the set working in mass to create a three-dimensional backdrop for the projections.

The model comes to life before the eyes of the audience through the projection of shadows into the different neighbourhoods, bringing to light the story's characters. While they are sleeping, their dreams emerge on a huge screen over the city, allowing the audience to plunge deep into their imagination. In contrast to this fantastic world and to underline the violence of the situation, the city also maintains the appearance of a simple model – white and sterile – that the puppeteers transform into a modern city in full view of the audience.

Les Somnambules combines different artistic disciplines. Music, a fundamental element of the performance, carries the narration. It is composed and played by two multi-instrumentalists, stationed next to the model. Traditional and invented instruments, original melodies and handcrafted sound effects accompany each step of the city's evolution.

Free of any verbal dialogue, Les Somnambules is intended for everyone and invites members of the audience to imagine their own cities.

1. OLD CITY

It is the end of the day in an old neighbourhood of a city.

The main square is surrounded by small streets, houses, and a bar called "Aux Somnambules". The building facades leave the audience to imagine the neighbourhood's past and the different time periods that have left their mark. This square has been condemned for destruction, as is suggested by a billboard boasting the advantages of the future remodelled and modernized neighbourhood and informing the public of the first phase of a huge restructuring project.

Inhabitants refusing to be evicted attempt to sabotage the construction site and meet at the neighbourhood bar to celebrate their actions.

2. CITY IN CONSTRUCTION

The city appears under a cold white light like a lifeless model. All traces of the shadow theatre disappear and leave a stark – homogenous and stripped down – set in its wake.

A new city is gradually constructed and shaped by the puppeteers turned urban planners before the audience's eyes. They manipulate the model's elements, completely restructuring the old neighbourhood. This brutal change to the environment is forced upon the inhabitants.

The city gains all of the characteristics of a modern metropolis. Distinct areas emerge and partition the different zones: business districts with rising towers, uniform housing units, concentrated commercial spaces, methodically organized greenery, roads criss-crossing the city, etc.

3. NEW CITY

The sun rises on the new city that gradually comes to life with the rhythm of well-regulated mechanisms: the regular flow of car and subway traffic, the measured movements of inhabitants traveling from one zone of the city to the other, the systematic cleaning of streets, the same work repeating over and over again... no longer leaving room for the unexpected.

The characters of the old neighbourhood appear in this newly transformed city and must adapt themselves to this unfamiliar environment that is both cold and highly structured.

4. CITY OF DREAMS

Each night, when the city sleeps, its inhabitants dream. Their dreams are concrete repercussions on the city, up to the point where they alter it completely. An inhabitant dreams that he pushes back the walls of his apartment and transforms it in an extraordinary manner. A secretary has strange nightmares. A supermarket check-out clerk escapes the city during an imaginary walk. In another dream, nature takes back its place and turns the city into a luxurious jungle.

The fantasies of these inhabitants mingle with one another, inciting new dreams which continually reinvent the city, creating a place where anything is possible albeit in permanent transition.

STAGE PLAN

The city model is built upon tiered levels creating an accelerated perspective effect that gives the audience the illusion that the city is extending before their eyes into infinity.

Behind the model is a screen and four stage rises on which set pieces are placed for projection. Two musicians, playing live side by side, are located downstage right.

The majority of the buildings and transportation routes are modifiable depending on the stages of the city's evolution. They can be manipulated either by a pulley system or in direct view of the audience, lit from within or by lights placed around the model.

The audience is seated directly in front of the stage.
